

Geography

The aim of our geography lessons is to inspire a fascination and curiosity about the world that will last a lifetime. Children become geographers, developing key skills that are revisited and built upon as they move through the school. Many of our geography lessons involve active processes of investigation, and whenever possible practical fieldwork outside of the classroom.

Initially, fieldwork focuses on the school grounds and the immediate locality of the school. These experiences, and the knowledge taken from them, then supports the children to make comparisons between localities. As the children progress, they study beyond the UK into the wider world.

Regular school trips provide our children with the opportunity to develop and reinforce their knowledge.
